These are Georgians---

They can be found in many places.

Doing many things---

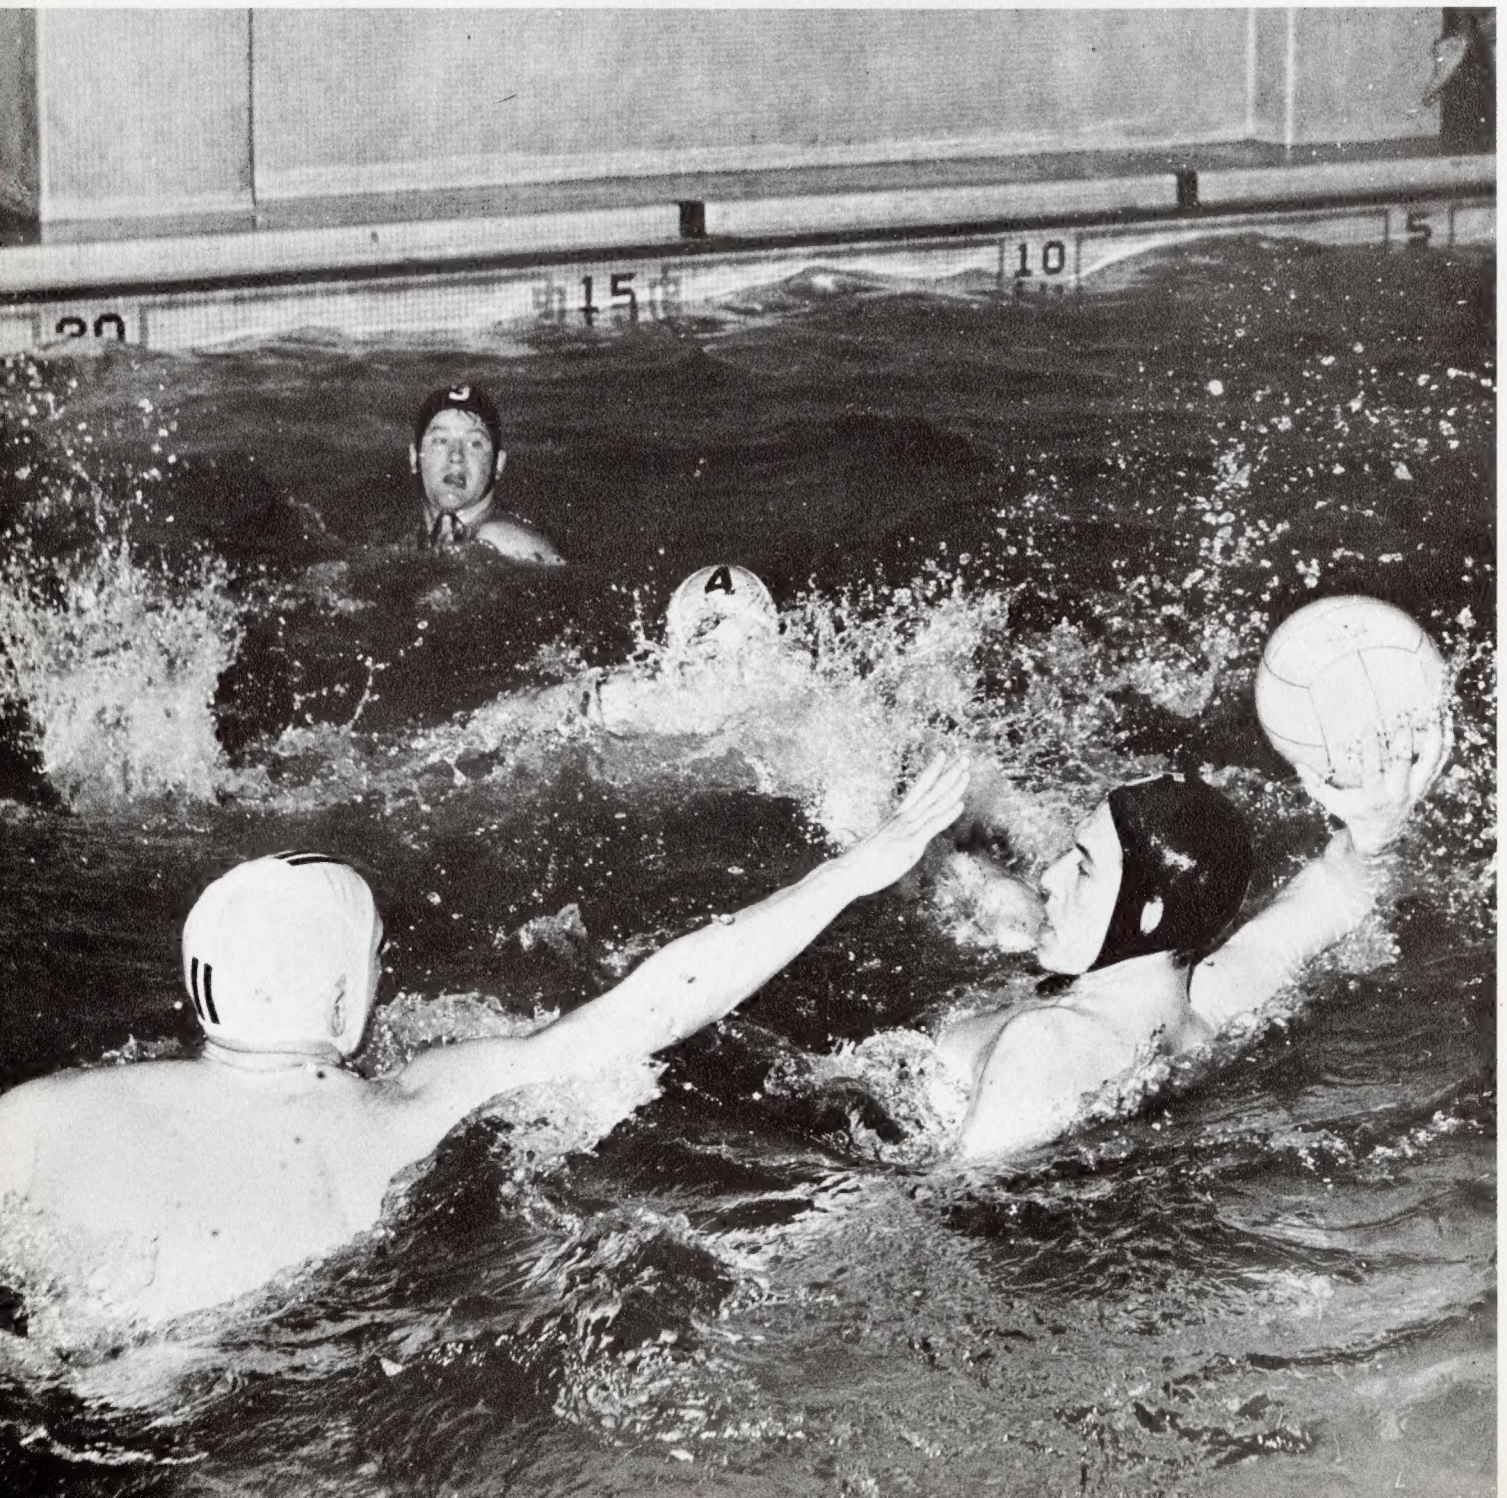

.....conducting scientific experiments in laboratories.....

.....and other experiments in other places.....

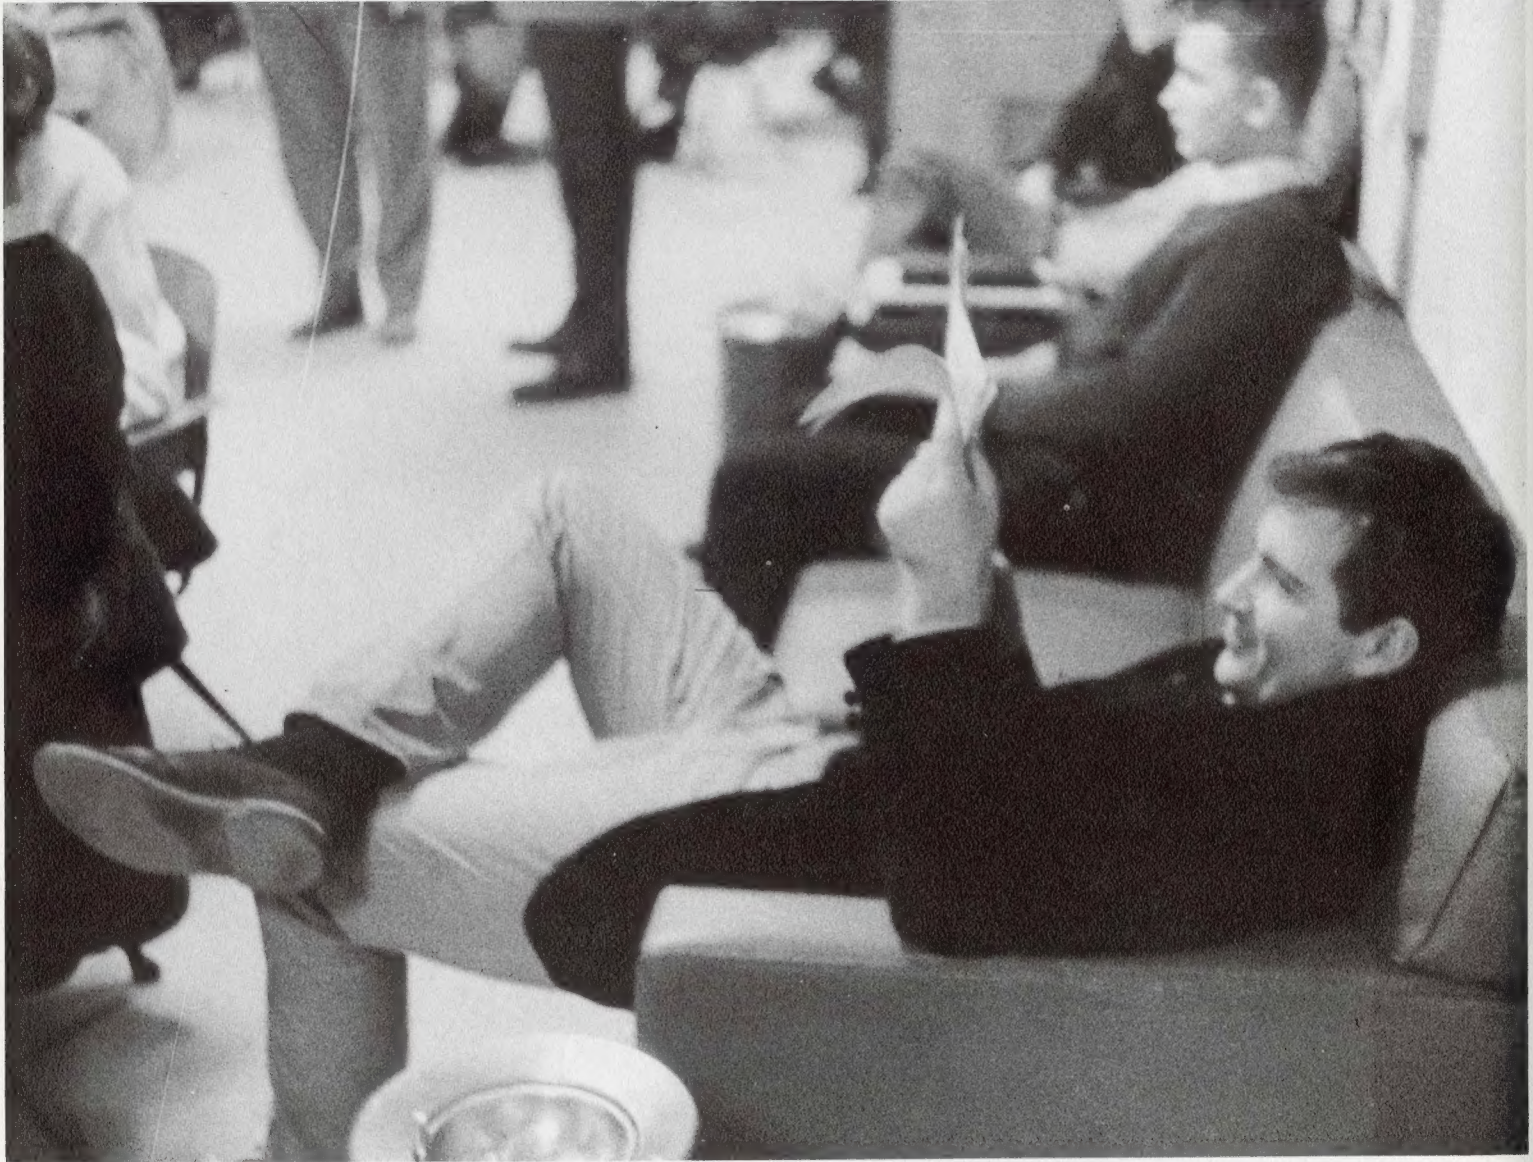

.....being athletic.....

.....each, of course, in his own way.....

.....sometimes just sitting, thinking.....

.....or, maybe, 'cutting-up'.....

.....and even, occasionally, studying..... but whatever they do, be it serious or comic, Georgians always display a flair, vigour, and sense of companionship that has become known as the Georgian Spirit..... it is to this spirit, as typified by our mascot Rupert, and to the eternal perpetuation of this spirit, that we of the editorial board solemnly dedicate this book, Garnet '59.

OFFICE OF THE PRINCIPAL

Through the courtesy of the Editor, I am asked to write a few words of greeting to the members of the Class of 1959. May I also take advantage of the opportunity to make a few suggestions.

It is undeniable that the world is changing. Of course, it always changes, but our generation has seen an acceleration of this change unsuspected in previous times. Atomic energy and space travel are but the more spectacular of many present and potential achievements of our day. However, the social results of these achievements still constitute one of our leading problems. The "cultural lag" is much more acute than when the concept was devised some decades ago. It is my opinion that the generation to which the Class of '59 belongs will have to face and to some degree settle this problem of the social application of science and technology.

An aspect of this larger question is the continuing fact that so many applications of advanced knowledge are made in the direction of spectacular achievements rather than the more prosaic solutions of the problems of the great mass of humanity. Speed of long-distance travel is greatly increased, but that of reaching work places from home is more and more retarded. Space ships are being devised, but a large proportion of the world's population is undernourished. Communication throughout the world has become instantaneous, but forty-five percent of the children of the world do not attend schools. These are only illustrations of the problems which new graduates face on a world scale.

On the other hand, at no time were the possibilities more exciting. The world of knowledge is within your grasp. For those who have the vision to see and who are altruistically motivated, the future is brilliant with possibilities of which your ancestors were never aware. Whatever it holds for you, individually and collectively, you have the sincere best wishes of my colleagues and myself.

Valedictory Address

JAMES R. MCBRIDE

THIS evening it is my honor and privilege, having been elected by the members of this graduating class of '59, to represent them on this memorable occasion. For this opportunity I am grateful and I hope that I shall be able to express the feelings, and emotions of every graduate from both the day and the evening college.

With the graduating of the day students this evening, the college will see the last of its day classes that originated in the old school. For any student who spent four years in this institution spent the first year moving about from the main Y.M.C.A. building to one of the many annexes that were part of the college. Such was Sir George Williams College four years ago.

For the evening student, tonight marks the end of a long and arduous struggle that has lasted through many years. Not only did the evening student have to cope with college lectures and studies, but many a one among them is employed in industry and has the added responsibility of a family to raise and to provide for. His was not an easy task, but in spite of these problems the evening student, who brings with him to the college his experience, is a success and a great credit to the college.

Since the founding of the College in 1929, there has been a growth from thirty evening students to the present enrollment of six thousand and seventy-two students in both the day and evening divisions of the college. Along with this growth there was a spirit that started with a small college and continued to grow in accord with the college, until the college reached its present proportions. Although in its larger one unit building, the spirit may not be as noticeable as it was, I am sure that tonight as we are gathered here that we do not feel we are day or evening graduates, but simply the Graduating Class of '59 Georgians.

What makes the Georgian Spirit and the Georgian graduate distinct from the spirit and graduate of other colleges? There are a great many things that contribute to this difference, but I feel one of the most important is the amount of authority and control left to the undergraduate in student affairs. This is an extremely liberal idea, for not only does it allow the students to govern themselves, it allows the students to think and make their own decisions and in doing so it develops their values. In this way the college is preparing us for a time when we shall have to make our own decisions in industry and our personal life.

Throughout this freedom of control the college and its authorities are always ready and willing to advise and give constructive criticism whenever needed. There are few colleges where both students and administration sit down at a conference table to discuss mutual problems in order that the students be allowed to make their own suggestions and decisions. At times the college has let its weight be felt and has taken steps to aid student activities when they thought aid was needed, but these times have been extremely rare. There have been numerous occasions however, when the college has received criticism from the student body and has taken this in its stride and hoped that what it has taught, and its belief, will see the students through times of crisis. One example of this has recently been expressed by a former Valedictorian and Georgian editor who stated in a letter to the Assistant Dean of Student Affairs.

"You will recall where the faculty of Ottawa University boycotted the student newspaper for publishing student articles which were extremely critical towards the administrative policies of the University. As I read about this situation I recalled my days at Sir George when some of the students, myself included, criticized vehemently the administration of Sir George for its Y.M.C.A. contact and some of the policies connected with this. I recalled especially the way the faculty let us air, and print our opinions, taking our nastiness on the chin in silent wisdom.

I read this Ottawa University incident and felt fortunate for having had the opportunity of attending a college that fosters, to the full, freedom of expression, even though some of the expression be unkind and short-sighted."

That, fellow graduates, is a good example of our college, a college where education does not mean simply attending lectures, listening to the professors and learning from texts, but an education where the college develops our attitudes, abilities and skills, and allows us to develop as mature individuals through freedom of expression.

Through this freedom of expression there has been developed between the students a strong understanding of the many problems that face the different races, creeds, and religions of today. Along with this understanding there has also been developed friendships that have lasted and will last for many years. So the college has done its part. It has provided us with the opportunity to obtain an education, the understanding and the friendships that we will need if we are to live a full and happy life.

This evening marks our graduation from Sir George Williams College but it by no means ends our education. We will never stop learning, and if we continue to apply the methods, principles, and ideas that have been taught to us, we will continue to develop in the true Georgian manner and be a credit to the world in which we live.

Tonight as our final parting act, we wish to thank the Board of Governors and the Faculty for the help and guidance they have given us. We wish to thank our parents, friends, and loved ones who have seen us through our college career and we realize, perhaps with regret, that all too soon the time has come to bid the college Farewell.

If necessity be the mother of invention then truly the Students' Executive Council was conceived in such a circumstance. With a firm conviction that a supreme student council was needed for Sir George Williams College, a group of students representing the Students' Undergraduate Society, the Evening Students' Association, the Publications Committee, and the Athletic Advisory Council met to overcome the barriers which, for four years had blocked any concrete realization of such a plan.

The group decided that in order to be certain that their planned organization would be operative and not just blindly theoretical, a functional constitution that might be changed when necessary would be best for the first year. In this way, errors in initial planning might be corrected and at the end of a year's operation, a truly operative constitution would be developed and adopted.

Meeting every second Wednesday evening and often carrying on well into the early hours of the morning, the Council put this plan into operation. During this past year, it brought into being the cultural program known as Pegasus. It stimulated and co-ordinated better joint activities while encouraging better relations between the various major organizations of the college.

Basically, the Students' Executive Council laid the foundation for a properly effective responsible student government. It will be the responsibility of next year's Council to fulfil the goals and ideals laid down by this first Council.

Doug Insleay Speaks...

As a newcomer to the Georgian Sports Scene, it is gratifying to see and feel the enthusiasm that permeates Georgian athletics. It is a privilege to be welcomed as one of you, to share your successes as well as failures, and to look back on many enjoyable and happy moments.

In the Ottawa-St. Lawrence Conference, Georgians won their share of inter-collegiate championships, leaving a fine impression wherever they competed.

While we do not have a huge athletic plant at our disposal, it is still possible for us to be involved in a very large and varied operation, involving an ever-increasing number of students. Interest in both the evening division program and women's athletics is increasing, while participation in intramurals and recreational activities also continues to grow.

As we look to the future, let us set our sights high and continue in the Georgian Tradition.

Sports Editorial

The '58-'59 Sports Scene at Sir George was one of much activity which met with strikingly little success. Only one championship was captured. In most sports, Maroon and Gold teams placed far down in the second division of their league standings.

Repeating last year's pattern, the greatest sporting glory of the year was brought to the College by John Smith-Chapman. Last year's North American Intercollegiate Squash champion, John, this year, placed second in the USA Amateur Squash Championship competition.

The only other sport in which Georgians gained any measure of success was water-polo. A powerful Georgian squad went undefeated in a five-game season, but withdrew from competition before attempting to garner the Canadian Collegiate Championship.

This unsuccessful season does not sound the death knell of Georgian athletics. It is merely an interim phase in which new, young athletes are developing to replace the former 'Iron-Men' of Sir George. Not only are the teams being reconstructed, but the entire athletic program of the college is undergoing an extensive face-lifting. Greater and greater emphasis is being placed on Intramural sports. Plans may even be underway to improve and increase athletic facilities. The Athletic Council has finally established itself as a totally independent entity, having this year broken away from SEC control.

These changes may not be perceptible at present, and may even remain relatively unnoticed next year, but they will be felt. Sir George will soon regain its former powerful position in Inter-collegiate Athletics.

Athletic Advisory Council

Front: Valerie Davis, Denise Marantz, Dick Mackay, Anne Tolhurst, Prof. J. E. Zweig.
Rear: Herb Vool, Ass't. Dean Magnus Flynn, Athletic Director Douglas Insleay, Prof. E. E. McCullough, John Foulkes, Larry Nachshen.
Absent: Col. S. C. Holland, Malcolm Saunders, Peter Smythe.

Until three years ago, the college athletic program was governed by a student athletic board which applied to the S.U.S. and the E.S.A. for an annual grant of funds to run the program. With the growth of the College, and the increased participation in Inter-collegiate competition, it became evident that there was a need for an independent organization to initiate and govern the college's athletic program.

Further, it was agreed that, as the college was responsible to C.I.A.U. for the inter-collegiate program, the administration should be represented on this organization. Then, for advice and counsel, the Alumni were given two representatives, the Faculty Council was asked to appoint two representatives, and the Day and Evening Students' organizations three each. Most important of all, the Board of Governors agreed to have a member on the Athletic Council, which, in effect, made the Council representative of every facet of College life.

Operationally, the Director of Athletics and his staff are responsible for carrying out an annual program as approved by the Council within the facilities and finances available. From a financial point of view, the student fee portion paid to the Council represents less than one-fifth of the total athletic expenses of the College.

In its two full years of operation, the Athletic Council has been an unqualified success. The various representatives have cooperated to develop a program which can best serve the students of the College. There remain many problems to be solved, particularly in the area of facilities, but the Council has every hope that the College program will grow and flourish.

Traditions that live

Strong and honourable traditions provide the foundation of firm training in leadership expressed today in the motto of the three Canadian Services Colleges: 'Truth-Duty-Valour.'

Allied to the prestige of the past is advanced education at university level given by these colleges to the officer-cadets of Canada's armed forces. Carefully selected high school graduates are trained for challenging professional careers as officers in the Navy, Army or Air force, for the responsibility of holding the Queen's Commission.

to serve the Future

Through the Regular Officer Training Plan (ROTP) the Department of National Defence will sponsor a limited number of qualified High School graduates to obtain a university education, either at the Canadian Services Colleges or at designated Canadian universities. Full details of this financial assistance can be obtained without obligation from your nearest Armed Forces Recruiting Centre, or by mailing this coupon now.

'Closing date for candidates applying for 1959 fall classes is 1 July 1959'.
